Building Lives and Factories screened at PNCA

Islamabad: The United Nations Information Centre in partnership with the Pakistan National Council of Arts on Friday organized the documentary screening “Building Lives and Factories” in the context of UN Cinema at Pakistan National Council of Arts (PNCA) in Islamabad.

The documentary explores the past, present, and future of industrial development with a particular focus on the implications of fourth industrial revolution.

Directed by Miles Roston and produced by United Nations Industrial Development Organization, the visually stunning film depicts the history of industrialization, and its role in promoting social and economic growth, as well as the opportunities and challenges that accompany industrial progress and innovation.

The documentary also details how rapid industrialization in Spain at the beginning of the twentieth century enabled women to enter the labour market, ultimately changing household dynamics and even encouraging these women to claim the right to vote.

UN Cinema is collaboration between the UN Information Centre and PNCA to feature films and documentaries focused on development, humanitarian issues and human rights from around the world.

Essam Alqararah, Country Representative UNIDO said:

“The film does not just tell us about what the industrialisation has been through for more than hundred years but also throwing light into the future. He also highlighted the contributions UNIDO has made in Paksitan since more than 45 years to inspire the next generations to promote Industry, Innovation and Infrastructure for poverty reduction, inclusive globalization and environmental sustainability”.

Vittorio Cammarota, Director UN Information Centre said:

“Cinema is a powerful tool for raising awareness of development issues among the general public. The support of PNCA is instrumental for ensuring that Pakistani people are aware of how they can contribute to the development of their own country”.
