PRESS RELEASE

Parliamentarians from Pakistan and across South Asia discuss how to ensure rights for all children

Colombo, 2 September 2019 : Parliament of Sri Lanka together with the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) is hosting parliamentarians from across South Asia to celebrate the 30-year anniversary of the Convention of the Rights of the Child.

At the meeting, parliamentarians will take stock of the situation of children in the region and discuss the key challenges towards realization of all rights of all children to ensure further progress.

The South Asia Parliamentarian Platform for Children being held in Colombo from 2nd to 3rd September will also give the parliamentarians the opportunity to make fresh commitments to push the national agendas for the realization of child rights.

"The Convention has helped to transform children's lives for the better and has ensured that Governments have favorable policies, changed laws, and made investments so that more children get the chance to thrive and have a good, protected childhood. Nevertheless, the Convention is still not fully implemented everywhere, and millions of children continue to suffer violations of their rights when they are denied adequate healthcare, nutrition, education and protection from violence," said Ms. Jean Gough, Regional Director for UNICEF South Asia.

This is the third year that UNICEF organizes a meeting with parliamentarians from the region to connect them to discuss the situation of children and inspire them to take action for improvement in their lives.

"I believe parliamentarians play a central role in ensuring that all children lead a full life as per their rights. Since the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child by Pakistan, the rights of children are violated every day, and this is not only in Pakistan, but it is the dilemma of South Asian Nations. I look forward to the South Asia Parliamentarian Platform for Children meeting in Colombo to meet with passionate and committed parliamentarians and to join hands and re-commit to use our political positions to undertake concrete actions for realization of child rights in our respective countries and South Asia," said Hon. Mehnaz Aziz, Chairperson of the CRC committee and member of the National Assembly in Pakistan.

The Convention on the Rights of the Child is the most widely ratified human rights treaty. Thirty years on, child rights have not changed, but childhood for about 627 million South Asian children has changed, with the coming of the internet, the effects of climate change, rapid urbanisation and other emerging issues.

"We see new threats for children, but also many new opportunities for children to realise their rights. That is why we are content to be working with parliamentarians from all over South Asia to ensure that we speed up positive actions for children to ensure a healthy and educated young generation across the region", said Jean Gough.
